INDUSTRIAL NOTES.

THE HANCOCK INSPIRATOR CO. has just placed on the market a new line of valves of especial high quality, designed to give satisfaction under very high pressures. The valves are made in globe, angle and cross styles, and both screwed and flanged in sizes up to 3 ins. We are informed that, under actual test, the bodies of these valves will stand a pressure of 4,000 lbs. per sq. in. without breaking, and they are all tested before leaving the works with 1,000 lbs. per sq. in. water pressure, and are guaranteed to be tight at that pressure. They are also guaranteed for 500 lbs. steam pressure. The details of the valve have been carefully worked out to provide strength, durability, freedom from cutting, and ease of regrinding when the valve leaks.

THE UNITED STATES STEEL PILING CO., 135 Adams St., Chicago, reports that its special section for sheet piling has been successfully rolled at the Homestead Works of the Carnegie Steel Co. This form of sheet steel piling was described and illustrated in our issue of Sept. 29, but there had been some doubt expressed as to whether such a section could be successfully rolled.

THE B. F. STURTEVANT CO., of Hyde Park, Mass., states that the rigid specifications drawn by the United States Navy Department for auxiliary engines required in the equipment of vessels of recent construction, have done much to improve their general standard of efficiency. It is therefore unusual to find that even these exceptional requirements have been improved upon. Sturtevant cross-compound engines have shown upon an economy test a consumption of steam per horse-power per hour fully 4 lbs. less than that demanded by the specifications. These results are characteristic of a line of specially high grade engines being built by the above mentioned company to develop from 25 to 150 HP. When the gases pass through an economizer containing pipes arranged longitudinally in straight rows with intervening straight free air spaces, they do not come into contact with a large part of each pipe; in other words, they are not sufficiently agitated by the pipes. In fact, there is always a considerable amount of gas which passes quickly through the openings between the rows of pipes without giving up any appreciable heat until it joins with the colder gases at the economizer outlet. The patent arrangement of "staggered pipes" in the Sturtevant Economizers in which the several sections are so arranged that the pipes of any one section stand longitudinally opposite the spaces between the pipes of adjoining sections overcomes this loss of heat. With this arrangement the gases are agitated and come into contact with a maximum area of the economizer pipes utilizing a maximum amount of the waste heat from the boiler.

Elizabeth, N. J., Apr. 26, 1903.

ENGINEERING NEWS COMPANY,
220 Broadway, New York City.

Dear Sirs:

I have disposed of my Steam Shovel this week through the advertisement in your paper. If I have anything in the advertising line again I will favor you with it.

Yours truly, T. J. SHEA.

This is the result of a one-inch advertisement, single insertion, in our "For Sale" columns for one advertiser, and our paper will do the same for you. Order a one- or two-inch "For Sale" or "Want" Card in ENGINEERING NEWS at $1.50 an inch per week, to continue until forbidden. Contractors should offer their machinery for sale before they are through using it, so that intending purchasers may look the plant over while it is in operation.

IT PAYS TO DO THIS.
